NIFTY CHART

In the last 8 days index has witnessed relatively less weaker sessions as indicated by the improving RSI on the daily scale. The evidence of a clear positive divergence on the RSI vis a vis the Price action has been good enough to conclude that the ongoing decline from 12400 seems to have concluded & a reversal might have been established in the short term. In the recent days we witnessed multiple spinning top formations around the value zone of 8555-7500 while the Time Tool also coincided around the same juncture. Volatility has been cooling off due to the recent stimulus & lack of participation on the leverage side hence the trading environment for short term traders would still remain vulnerable. Hence as per time & condition evolving this continues to be an ideal setup zone for investors to keep accumulating quality stocks in a staggered
